Institutional Context

Gordon College is a Christ-centered comprehensive institution offering liberal arts, graduate and professional programs, integrating career-focused academics and an open-handed approach to faith formation. The College has a distinguished history of shaping students who lead lives of purpose, character and faith. Known for academic rigor and spiritual depth, the College has long been a respected voice within Christian higher education. As a close-working community of faculty and staff, we value collaboration, stewardship, and innovation in advancing our mission.

In these pivotal times in higher education, Gordon College continues to innovate across academic and operational areas to best serve its learners and broader community. While the College has achieved many of its innovative goals, ongoing innovation and continuous improvement remain central to our culture, enabling us to serve students and steward both tangible and intangible resources effectively.

We seek a forward-thinking financial leader who thrives in a mission-driven, student-centered environment and brings both strategic vision and hands-on expertise to a small, dynamic college setting. The next Chief Financial Officer will play a pivotal role in strengthening the College's financial sustainability through innovative budgeting practices, rigorous financial analysis and transparent reporting for internal and external stakeholders. This individual will collaborate closely with senior leadership to align resource allocation with institutional priorities, optimize the use of endowment and investment assets and advance data-informed decision-making across the College. This is a pivotal senior leadership role—ideal for a results-oriented leader who thrives in complex environments, brings both vision and discipline and is motivated by the chance to make a lasting institutional impact. The ideal candidate will be equally comfortable crafting high-level strategy, executing on the ground, leading strong teams, and aligning financial reporting and analysis efforts with the College's broader mission and vision.
